

"Welkommen gisteren"

(Welcome, yesterday)

From Holland's Golden Age comes the inspiration for a new pipe tobacco. Old Delft.

Step back for a moment to the warm, rich brick ovens of 17th Century Holland. Dutch men and women lived every day that breathless no merry of the great Dutch painters.

This was Holland's Golden Age, when "Delft" became the name for becoming the name for but brilliant art and a lively life of the city.

Three of people left a legacy of cultured taste. Ah, Dine fresh lobster and plums, cherries and sweet cream and triple Dutch.
 Their marvellous life.

And their splendid pipe tobacco has been the inspiration for by tradition but rarely duplicated in other countries.

But for the past several years, a team of tobacco experts has been been working to achieve the same of cut, flavor, aroma, and smoothness that reflects this elusive Dutch legacy. A blend new.

And now, with Old Delft, they have exceptionally pleasing to those around you.
 The tobacco is made from the same tobacco as the original Dutch tobacco, and together smoke that burns cool and evenly.

Old Delft comes in a special inner wrap of gold foil that results in a touch as your smoking.

Yesterday was good,
 but today is better, in Old Delft.
